MAZAFATI DATE

Mazafati date is one of the major products of Iran. This type of date is soft and is highly popular in Iran and the rest of world. It has a purplish to black color, and is fleshy, juicy and very delicious. The fruit's moisture varies depending on the harvest time and the location of the grove. Its size is generally between 2.5 and 4.5 cm.

RABBI DATE

Rabbi has thin skin, is juicy, with a little seed and is the most early-ripening type of date in Iran. Rabbi date is extremely popular, so that often it presells before production. This type is also used as an industrial date, and products such as date syrup, date liquid sugar, date chocolate, fruit leather (Lavashak), cookie and some beverage ingredients is obtained from it. Apart from its long shelf life, its shipping is easy and requires no refrigeration.

SAYER DATE

Sayer or Esta'maran is one of the most abundant date species in Iran. It is slightly elongated, oval and typically brown colored and its khalal is yellow. Average weight of fruit is 8.5 grams and kernel weight is 0.9 grams. This date is one of the most important export figures and it is available in three types of seeded, seedless and chopped. The chopped type is used in cooking, or served with tea and other drinks.

PIAROM DATE

This type of date is one of the most delicious dry dates. It is long with a dry texture and is generally colored dark brown. Its Khalal tends to have a yellowish and brown color, with a thin peel. This type is among the late-ripening type of dates. Piarom dates are rich in carbohydrates, protein and other minerals and have a high nutritional value.
